PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

The Global Balanced Portfolio returned -1.5% in July, taking 2026 YTD returns to 4.9%.

Markets experienced a volatile July as investors balanced strong corporate earnings against concerns over inflation, energy prices and the outlook for AI-related investment. Q2 earnings season remained supportive, with 86% of S&P 500 companies exceeding analyst expectations so far. However, sentiment weakened as the MSCI World Semiconductors Index fell around 13% amid concerns over AI demand and tighter export controls on advanced semiconductor technologies. Oil prices briefly rose above $100 per barrel following an escalation in Middle East geopolitical tensions.

The MSCI All Country World Index rose modestly in US Dollars, although performance varied across regions. The appointment of Andy Burnham as UK Prime Minister was welcomed by investors, providing additional support for UK equities. Emerging Markets were the weakest-performing region, with semiconductor-heavy markets such as Taiwan and South Korea underperforming and offsetting positive returns from China. Fixed income markets also struggled, with government bond yields rising as investors scaled back expectations for near-term rate cuts. Commodities were the strongest-performing asset class, supported by gains in energy markets amid geopolitical tensions, while gold was broadly resilient, posting a small positive return in US Dollar terms amid increased demand for defensive assets.
